PREFACE - 1887 Edition

No one, in the midst of the duties and cares of a busy life, who seeks, as I have done, to record the names and history of one's ancestry, but must in some measure be impressed with the truth uttered by the wisest of men,—“the glory of children are their fathers.” It is also equally true in this impetuous age that “an ungrateful generation neglects the memory of its fathers.” The motive is then apparent which must actuate the mind of him who attempts the often barren task of simply mapping out the line and printing out, it may be, the sturdy worth of his family stock. In America, with our democratic tendencies, we too often lose sight of our progenitors and let each generation come and go with scarcely any record of the brave men and the good women, of those prominent in public life or those who adorned the home-circle, and think if we ourselves perform what our hands find to do that then our full duty is done. To fill up the measure of what otherwise appears to me inexusable neglect, to perform an act which may be of some historical value is the sole purpose of this work. But a very few copies have been printed and it is intended to distribute them privately in the family referred to. Care has been taken to state clearly where tradition only is given, but in all the rest of the data, although there may be and undoubtedly are errors, an honest endeavor has been made to verify everything by actual record. In many cases the genealogy, for lack of accurate information, has not been entirely finished up to the present date, but it is presumed sufficient is given to enable any one to complete without difficulty the particular branch to which they belong or in which they may be most interested. This can easily be done by inserting a leaf and preparing the record therefor in the same style, adding a letter after the numerical designation of the last person referred to, as—171 A, 171 B, 171 C, &c. The work may also easily be interleaved for family photographs. It is suggested that two or three leaves for this purpose be placed between each printed page before binding. The compiler of this volume would be glad to be furnished with any new facts, any additional genealogy, any likenesses of the family, or to have any mistakes corrected. No apology is really needed for the more extended notice of such branches of the family as the writer is himself connected with.

It is perhaps useless to state that this task could not have been performed had it not been for the published history of the Bergen family, and the kindly aid constantly given by its indefatigable and accomplished author, the late the Hon. Teunis G. Bergen, of Bay Ridge, Long Island. During his life he never wearied in showing me where to find a missing link. To the late the Rev. Dr. Abraham Messler, of Somerville, New Jersey; the Rev. Edward T. Corwin, of Millstone, New Jersey; the late Judge Ralph Voorhees, of Franklin Park, Middlesex County, New Jersey, and to very many other members of the family name I am under great obligations for valuable aid and zealously searches in my behalf.

PREFACE - 2004 Edition

My interest in the Strÿcker/Stryker family stems from the fact that Jan (1) Strỹcker's 4th great granddaughter, Maria D.(386), married my great great grandfather, Joseph A. Skillman, so that Jan is my 8th great grandfather. In addition, I am aware of at least 10 other Skillman/ Strỹcker marriages.

Recently, I was able to download a copy of this book from the Web, and then convert it to an electronic file. The basic format of the original has been preserved. I have carefully checked the spelling, but some subtle typos may have escaped me. To help the researcher, I have added a "+" in front of persons who have their family listed later in the text. I have added a few parenthetical comments prefaced with "ed."

I would appreciate hearing from you about corrections.

THE STRÝCKER FAMILY.

“He who careth not whence he came careth little whither he goeth.” (ed. Daniel Webster, 1782-1852)

The Strýcker family is of remote antiquity in Holland. All the several branches of the family in the United States, whose names, idem sonans, regardless of the spelling, which has been often changed and written Stryker, Strýcker, Striker, Stricker, are derived directly from this old Dutch parentage. Certain parts of the family have been seated near The Hague for over eight hundred years and another line near Rotterdam. It appears that the prefix “Van” in olden times was often written before the name, but it was dropped, however, by the brothers who came to America. In St. Bavon’s Kirk, the Great Church at Haarlem, which contains the grand organ, we find interred in the High Choir, No. 37 the remains of Dirck Strýcker, who died September 2, 1677, who was Secretary to the Court of Law in Holland. That he was a man of note and influence is indicated by the official burial book and the tablets in that ancient edifice.

From Motley’s history of the Dutch Republic we learn that one Herman Strýcker, a monk who had abjured Romanism, created, in the year 1562, a wide spread revival of religion among the masses of Holland. Mrs. Charles, in her “Deliverers of Holland,” gives considerable account of his labors. His eloquence drew thousands to listen to him, and it is said he preached to fifteen thousand men in arms during the regency of Alva.

In the pedigree of the family fourteen descents are given in Holland up to 1791. Several years ago the late judge James Stryker (305) obtained from Holland the coat of arms of the family, and much of the interesting information here given concerning it.

The coat-armorial is as follows:

Pall of four, or and gules, three boars’ heads, sable, armed azure.

Crest—out of a ducal coronet, a griffin’s head sable, between two palm branches in ofle vert.

Supporters—Two dragons, dexter side gules, sinister side or.

There is a legend in the family that during the twelfth century the brothers by this name were very clannish and constituted a strong body of valiant men able and ready to defend their own rights with their own good swords. A jealousy of the most bitter kind broke out between them and another family equally renowned for prowess in combat. On one occasion the Van Strýcker family received an invitation to a great feast at which it was proposed to come to some final settlement of the feud which existed between these rival parties. They accepted, at the same time suspecting some treachery. The secret was discovered beforehand and a plan arranged to meet it. The feast began and in the middle of it the servants, of the host placed upon the table three boars’ heads. This was the signal agreed upon for the extermination of the Van Strýcker family. They, however, rallied quickly at a certain portion of the room, were terrible when they acted thus on the defensive and turned the plot with deadly effect upon their opponents. This tradition has come down through the family and may account for the boars’ heads which appear upon the coat of arms. The motto of the family, which in English means “Most terrible at bay,” has been Latinized “In extremis terribilis,” and although it still preserves the legend referred to is of little value historically, as few if any Dutch families retain the motto, even though it may have been hereditary with those who first adopted it. It is understood it is never given with the coat armor in Holland.

In the middle of the seventeenth century Jan and Jacobus Van Strýcker received from the States General of the Netherlands a grant of land in the colony at New Amsterdam, on the condition that they took out with them to America twelve other families at their own expense. This grant was dated in January, 1643. It does not appear that the offer was finally acted upon until eight years thereafter, and then the younger brother Jacobus left the fatherland one year before Jan, and founded the old Knickerbocker family of this name in and near New Amsterdam.

There is a record, however, on Volume I, page 437, of “Documents relative to the Colonial History of the State of New York,” edited by E. B. O’Callaghan, where one of the name of D. Strÿcker, with other Dutch merchants, petition the States General “representing that they have traded to all the Carribean(sic) Islands and to Virginia for twenty years; that from a feeble beginning their business at present is a source of astonishment to the whole world; that now the Parliament of England prohibit trade to the islands where they have colonies and particularly to the Virginias, and that they only give from October 3d, 1650, to March 20th, 1651, for us to take away our ships under pain of forfeiture of ships and goods. They pray the Noble, High and Mighty the Lords, States General of the United Netherlands, that they direct their Commissioners to treat with the Ambassadors from England so that they may be saved from loss or be deprived of a trade so advantageous.” It is generally supposed that this man returned to Holland, as no record can be found of him after this date and no trace of any of his descendants. It may however be, that this is the Dirck Strÿcker hereinbefore referred to.

Two facts may here be mentioned. In a hasty glance at this genealogical record the great longevity of the family cannot fail to be noticed. Another fact becomes equally patent to those who are at all familiar with the line, and who have examined carefully into the history and traditions of the family, and that is that many of the men were of exceptionally great physical strength.
FIRST GENERATION.

+ 1. JAN STRYCKER was born in Holland in the year 1615. He emigrated from Ruinen, a village in the province of Drenthe, with his wife, two sons and four daughters, and arrived at New Amsterdam in the year 1652. Leaving behind him all the privileges and rights which might be his by descent in the old world, he sought to start his family on new soil in habits of industry and honesty. He was a man of ability and education, for his subsequent history shows him to have been prominent in the civil and religious community in which his lot was cast.

His first wife in Holland was named Lambertje Seubering, and by her all his children were born there or in this country. She was certainly living in 1663. After her death (ed. June 21, 1675) he married, April 30, 1679, Swantje Jans, the widow of Cornelis De Potter, of Brooklyn. She died in the year 1686. On March 31, 1687, he married a third time, Teuntje Teunis, of Flatbush, widow of Jacob Hellakers, of New Amsterdam. She survived her husband. She is recorded as having united with the Dutch Church in New Amsterdam March 3, 1697.

Jan Strýcker remained in New Amsterdam a little over a year after his arrival there, and in the year 1654 he took the lead in founding a Dutch colony on Long Island at what was called Midwout, probably from a little village of that name in the province of North Holland. It was also called Middlewoods, possibly from some of the features of that locality. The modern name of the place is Flatbush.

On the 11th of December, 1653, while still in New Amsterdam, Jan Strýcker joined with others in a petition of the Commonalty of the New Netherlands and a remonstrance against the conduct of Director Stuyvesant. The petition recited that “they apprehended the establishment of an arbitrary government over them; that it was contrary to the genuine principles of well regulated governments that one or more men should arrogate to themselves the exclusive power to dispose at will of the life and property of any individual; that it was odious to every free-born man, principally so to those whom God has placed in a free state on newly settled lands. We humbly submit that ‘tis one of our privileges that our consent, or that of our representatives, is necessarily required in the enactment of laws and orders.”

If is remarkable that at this early day this indictment was drawn up, this “bill of rights” was published. But these men came from the blood of the hardy Northmen and imbied with the free air of America the determination to be truly free themselves.

In the year 1654 Jan Strýcker was selected as the Chief Magistrate of Midwout, and this office he held most of the time for twenty years. The last time we find the notice of his election was at the Council of War holden in Fort William Hendrick, August 18, Anno 1673, where the delegates from, the respective towns of Midwout, Bruckelen, Amers-fort, Utrecht, Boswyck and Gravesend selected him as “Schepen.”

In a work before referred to, Dr. O’Callaghan’s “Colonial History of New York,” Volume II, page 374, we find a letter to the Right Honorable Petrus Stuyvesant, Director General and Council of New Netherlands from the same Long Island towns just mentioned, “naming Jan Strýcker as one of the embassy from New Amsterdam and the principal Dutch towns to be sent to the Lord Mayors in Holland on account of their annoyance from the English and the Indians; they complain that they will be driven off their lands unless re-enforced from Fatherland.”

On the 10th of April, 1664, he took his seat as a representative from Midwout in that great Landtdag, a General Assembly called by the burgomasters, which was held at the City Hall in New Amsterdam, to take into consideration the precarious condition of the country. This meeting was presided over by Hon. Jeremias Van Rensselaer and Governor Stuyvesant was present at this august and memorable council (See Mrs. Lamb’s History of New York, Volume I, pages 203, 206 and 207.)
Also O’Callaghan’s New Netherland Register, page 147.

Director Stuyvesant, August 28th, 1664, addressed a letter to the Dutch towns on Long Island, calling upon them “to send every third man to defend the Capital from the English now arriving in the Narrows.” This the Court and Commonalty of the town of Midwout unanimously answered by Jan Strÿcker that it was impossible to comply with his demands as “we must leave wives and children seated here in fear and trembling, which our hearts fail to do—as the English are themselves hourly expected there.”

He was one of the representatives in the Hempstead Convention in 1665 and he appears as a patentee on the celebrated Nichols patent October 11th, 1667, and again on the Dongan patent November 12th, 1685.

On October 25th, 1673, he was elected Captain of the military company at Midwout and his brother Jacobus was given the authority to “administer the oaths and to instal (sic) him into office.”

On March 26, 1674, Captain Jan Strÿcker was named as a deputy to represent the town in a conference to be held at New Orange to confer with Governor Colve, “on Monday next, on the present state of the country.”

To turn from the civil and military man we find him in the first year of his residence at Midwout, one of the two commissioners to build the Dutch Church there—the first erected on Long Island, and he was for many years an active supporter of the Dominie Johannes Theodorus Polhemus, of the Reformed Church of Holland, in that edifice.

After raising a family of eight children, every one of whom lived to adult life and married, seeing his sons settled on valuable plantations and occupying positions of influence in the community, and his daughters marrying into the families of the Brinckerhoffs, the Berriens and the Bergens, living to be over eighty years of age, he died about the year 1697 full of the honors which these new towns could bestow, and with his duties as a civil officer and a free citizen of his adopted country well performed.

2. JACOBUS GERRITSEN STRYCKER, or Jacob Strýcker, as he seems to have generally written his name, was a younger brother of Jan and came from the village of Ruinen, in the United Provinces, to New Amsterdam, in the year 1651.

His wife was named Ytie (Ida) Huybrechts, whom he married in Holland, and he had at least two children, a son and a daughter.

On February 11, 1653, he bought a lot of land “on west side of the Great Highway, on the cross street running from the said highway to the shore of the North River, Manhattan Island.” A part of this “lot” is still in possession of the family as will hereafter appear.

He was a Great Burgher of New Amsterdam in 1653, 1655, 1657, 1658, 1660.

In the month of March, 1653, he appears as subscribing two hundred guilders to the fund for erecting a wall of earth mound and wooden palisades to surround the city of New Amsterdam to keep off the Puritan colonists of New England and unfriendly Indians. On May 27 of the same year the Worshipful Schepen, Jacob Strýcker, is the purchaser of a lot of land ten rods square on what is now Exchange Place, east of Broad street. In 1655 we find him contributing to a loan for the defence of the New Netherlands. (See O’Callaghan’s New Netherland Register, page 194.)

About the close of the year 1660 he removed to New Amers-fort, on Long Island, now called Flatlands. He must have returned for a time to New Amsterdam, for in 1663 he appears again as an alderman of the young colony there. In the year 1660 he and his wife appear on the records as members of the old Dutch Church of New York, and it is noted that he had removed to New Amers-fort. The record of the church in the latter place shows both of them as members there in the year 1667. On the 18th of August, 1673, he became Schout or High Sheriff of all the Dutch towns on Long Island—a position of influence and responsibility at that time. He was also, as well as his brother Jan, a delegate to the Convention, March 26, 1674, to confer with Governor Colve (ed. Anthony Colve, Dutch, third Gov. of New York, 1673-74) on the state of the colony.

He appears to have been somewhat of an artist, probably an amateur portrait painter, for a picture of himself painted on panel is still extant in the halls of the Striker mansion, on Eleventh avenue and Fifty-Second Street, New York City. This profession he did not follow, for he devoted himself to farming and trading with the Indians, a highly lucrative business, it is said, in those days. He seems to have been a gentleman of considerable means, of much official influence and of decided culture.

He died, as we find from the church records kept by Dominie Casparus Van Zuuren, in October, 1687.
SECOND GENERATION.

JAN STRÝCKER (1) and Lambertje Seubering had eight children:

3. Altje, born in Holland, married Abraham Jorise Brinckerhoff, May 20, 1660. He was born in Flushing, Holland, in 1632, and was an elder in the church and a magistrate at Flatlands in 1673. He died about 1714. (See Riker’s Annals of Newton, pages 292, 293; also Winfield’s History of Hudson county, New Jersey, page 527; also Bergen’s Early Settlers of Kings County, page 48.)

4. Jannetje, born in Holland, married (first) Cornelius Jansen Berrien, of Flatbush, who settled there in 1669, but removed to Newtown in 1685. He was a gentleman of high character and education. He died in 1689. She married (second) Samuel Edsall, of Newtown. (See Riker’s Annals of Newtown, pages 339, 340, 341.)

+ 5. Garrit Janse, generally written Garrit, born in Holland, married Styntie Gerritse Dorland December 28, 1683. He was High Sheriff of Kings county, commissioned October 11, 1686, and a Judge of Court in Richmond county in 1720. He lived in Flatbush. He was a member of the Dutch Church in Flatbush in 1677. He took the oath of allegiance in 1687.

6. Angenietje, born in Holland, married (first) Claes Tyson, April 5, 1656, who died before 1659; married (second) Jan Cornelise Boomgaert, or Bougaert, of Flatlands.

7. Hendrick, born in Holland, married Catherine Huys, of Flatbush, February 11th, 1687. He died in 1689, without issue. He lived in Flatbush. Hendrick and his father paid the highest taxes in 1676 of any person in the village. He was a member of the Church at Flatbush in 1677.

8. Eytie or Ida, born in Holland, married Stoffel Probasco, of New Lots, Long Island.

+ 9. Pieter, born November 1st, 1653, in Flatbush; married Annetje Barends May 29th, 1681; died June 11th, 1741. She died June 17th, 1717. He was one of the patentees of the town of Flatbush named in the Dongan patent November 12th, 1685. He was High Sheriff of Kings county, Long Island, Commissioned November 2nd, 1683; Judge of the Court from 1720 to 1722. On December 27th, 1689, we find him as a Captain of Foot Militia. His residence in Flatbush, torn down about forty years ago, was a stately Holland brick building in quaint Dutch style, with the letters “P. S., 1696,” over the doorway, and certainly its appearance indicated a home of genuine hospitality. Garret Stryker (528) lives on this property to-day, it having never passed out of the family. (See Vanderbilt’s Social History of Flatbush, page 214.)

On June 1st, 1710, he purchased of the three brothers, Aert, Matthew and David Aerson, of Brockland, Kings county, New York, the four thousand acres on Millstone River in Somerset county, New Jersey, which they had received by a patent deed from the Proprietors of East Jersey, January 9, 1702. This deed is still in existence. It does not appear that he ever lived on this property, but his sons Jacob and Barent and his grandsons, the four sons of Jan (19), removed from Flatbush and settled in Somerset county, New Jersey.

In connection with this purchase of Jersey land it is well to note that the Dutch land owners in and around New York thought the rule of the British Crown very oppressive. Looking across the harbor they saw the fine farms and the benign rule of the Proprietors of Jersey, and they resolved that at least some of their descendents should settle there. The exactions of the English in the matter of their town governments, and more especially the establishment of the Church of England among them, made them long to remove further away from their conquerors. Various parcels of land were purchased by companies, and the Strÿcker family selected the fertile soil of Somerset county for their future home.

10. Sara, born in Flatbush, married Joris Hansen Bergen, August 11, 1678, by Dominie Van Zuuren. He was baptized at New Amsterdam July 18, 1649; they were both members of the Dutch Church of Flatbush in 1677. They resided in Brooklyn in 1687, and he was elder in the church there in 1702. He was living in 1736.

JACOBUS GERRITSEN STRÝCKER (2) and Ytie Huybrechts had two children:

+ 11. Gerrit married Wyntie Cornelise Boomgaert, December, 1673; died in 1694. She died in 1700. He was made Sheriff of Kings county by Governor Dongan in 1688. They lived in Flatlands and were both members of the Dutch Church there in 1677. In 1692 he bought a house and farm of one hundred and eight and three-quarters acres in Gravesend, Long Island, of William Goulding, for £297, 10s.

12. Altje married Abraham Stevense Van Voorhees, of Flatlands, son of Stephen Courten Van Voorhees.

He was a zealouous patriot during the entire war and performed conspicuous service whenever the British forage parties attempted to raid into the Jerseys. Most of the land seen from the house was held by some branch of the family. It is now not far from the station of Weston, on the Delaware and Bound Brook Railroad, a few rods away from the old burial ground where General Frederick Frelinghuysen is interred. Captain John Stryker was buried in the middle of a fifteen acre field on his own farm, and the inscription on the stone reads:

In memory of John Stryker, who died March 25, 1786, aged 46 years and 23 days.

He was a courtly gentleman of the old school and one of the strong men of the church. See Taylor’s Annals of the Classics of Bergen, page 304; and

JOHN STRYKER (84) and Lydia Cornell had ten children:

162. Mary, born October 5, 1764; married Jacobus Quick.

+ 163. Peter I., born near Millstone, New Jersey, June 22, 1766; married (first) Magdalena, dughter of Henry Schenck, of Millstone, July 15, 1789. She was born December 27, 1766, and died January 17, 1804. They were both members of the Dutch Church at Millstone, in July, 1799.
He married (second) Maria Mercer. He died at Somerville, New Jersey, October 19, 1859. When a mere boy he aided his father during the Revolutionary War in supplying provisions to the troops of the American Army, especially of General Anthony Wayne’s command, and often heard his father give an account of the many attacks he had made on the flanks of the British Army with his famous troop of Horse. Thus early in life he imbibed a taste for military pursuits. After the war he commenced the study of medicine and practiced the profession first at Millstone, removing, however, to Somerville, in 1810. He soon obtained a large and excellent practice in Somerset county and his kindness to the worthy poor is still remembered to his honor in that community. He often filled offices of high trust. He was Sheriff of the county, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, a member of New Jersey House of Assembly, thirtieth to thirty-fifth sessions, and of Senate, forty-fifth to fiftieth sessions, the last three sessions as President of that body. By virtue of the latter position on one occasion he acted for a few months as Governor of the State. He was commissioned Brigadier General, Somerset Brigade, New Jersey Militia, February 19, 1812, and as such organized troops in the War of 1812, under orders of the Governor of New Jersey, April 25, 1812, for 5,000 men. He was detailed as one of the three General officers to command this force. He was promoted Major General of the Third Division of the Militia November 23, 1822, and held the office until his defeat. When the war broke out with Mexico he offered his services to President Polk and it was evidently his desire to take part in that stubborn contest. On Friday, October 12, 1855, being then the senior Major General of the State, at the age of 89 he mounted his horse and with his long gray hair floating in the wind reviewed his Division at New Brunswick, in true soldierly style. He was also a most devoted Christian and was often called to bear office in the church. For nearly half a century his religious life was of the most consistent character. His personal appearance was impressive. His habits of the strictest honor, his dignified and courteous bearing, his kind words and polite manners made him really a “gentleman of the old school.” His long life was filled up with the performance of public duties, and conferring private benefits, the well rounded character and work of a patriot and a Christian.

In 1847 he was made Treasurer of the State to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the incumbent. For a number of years he was a director of the Trenton Banking Company, and at the formation of the Peoples’ Fire Insurance Company, he was made its President, which position he held until his death. He was a gentleman of unblemished reputation and held a high position in the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens. Modest and unpretending, kind and courteous, and

He was made a trustee of the First Presbyterian Church of Trenton, in 1833, and was an Elder therein from 1836 to the day of his death. He was a Manager of the New Jersey State Lunatic Asylum from its foundation to the close of his life. He was once called to be a Judge on the bench of the Court of Common Pleas. He was chosen by the Legislature, with eight of the most prominent citizens of the State, to represent New Jersey in what is known as the Peace Convention, at Washington, in 1861. He filled various other positions of trust in Savings Institutions, the Board of Trade, the Historical Society. He was made a director of The Trenton Banking Company in 1831, and Cashier thereof September 30, 1842, which position he held for just thirty years. As executor, guardian, trustee, bondsman, arbitrator, counselor, he drew to him a large class of persons who knew how trustworthy he was, how influential among men of all classes and tempers, how judicious his mediation in controversies. With all this amount of labor, much of it freely bestowed for other people, work far beyond what he was called upon to do by any private gain of his own, he joined with his exacting business life the character of an active Christian. At all church services he was there; in all church business he took part; in Presbytery and Synod he was relied on as the active worker and prudent adviser. His pastor said of him, “his integrity, benevolence and usefulness were based on the accountability in which he held himself to God.” In dying he gave testimony to his faith when he said the promises of God “are full and sure.” In the Church, the Family and the Community his principles were those of a Christian and in them he lived firm and consistent to the end.

He was a Captain in the Fifth New York Regiment, in the war of 1812, and the camp of his command was where Central Park is now located. The old powder house marked the line of the entrenchments around the encampment. He was after the war made a Major General of the New York State Militia. He lived in the old mansion on what is now Eleventh avenue and Fifty-second street. A picture of him therein shows a gentleman of the old school, of fine proportions and soldierly bearing. On the walls of this dwelling is also to be seen a portrait of Jacobus Gerritsen Van Strýcker (2), painted by himself on panel. Within this house the ceilings are low, but the rooms large and the halls wide, and to-day all the old belongings, the carved wooden mantels, the brass fenders, andirons, and much of the furniture are kept with the greatest care and in perfect order.

The polished mahogany balustrade ends in a lion’s head, finely carved. The river front of this estate belongs in perpetuity to the family and cannot be taken from them by city legislation. We can but wish with all our heart that the city in its hurry and rush up town might pass the old mansion, leaving it untouched, to remain, just as it is, a beautiful remembrance of the old manorial residences and the fresh rural life of the old Knickerbockers of New York.

For the material of this sketch I am indebted to Mrs Greatorex’ work on Old New York, and a history of the mansion given in Appleton’s Journal of November 23, 1872.

In this same connection, although with special reference to one of the sons of General Striker, we give an extract from an article in the New York Herald, March 30, 1883, entitled “From the Old Homestead; Traditions of a Knickerbocker Line.”

“The funeral of Ambrose Kingsland Striker, last surviving son, save one, of General Garrit H. Striker, who won distinction in the war of 1812, and a descendant of one of the oldest families of the city, took place yesterday afternoon from the Striker homestead, at the foot of West Fifty second street.

The chief mourners were James Alexander Striker, brother, and Ellsworth L. and Joseph M. L. Striker, nephews of the deceased.

Few places are left in New York that have about them so much of the atmosphere of bygone days as the old Striker homestead between Fifty-second and Fifty-third streets a narrow lane turns down toward the Hudson from Eleventh avenue. The stroller who turns from the dust and noise and squalor of the thoroughfare into this quiet nook feels as if he had on a sudden dropped into some village or dreamland, where the airs of spring were always fresh and balmy, the soil always soft and springy under foot, and where the inhabitants wore away a contented existence, ending their lives between the same roof-trees that protected them in infancy.

The lane is called in the neighborhood Striker’s lane. The gate at its head gives entrance to the grounds of the Striker homestead, the old time home of an old family—a charming spot, guarded with lovely care from the devastation of years and progress—a secluded corner, fenced off from the busy city where the traditions and the fashions of a bygone age maintain a kind of crystallized existence. (ed. today, 2004, this appears to be the De Witt Clinton Park)

Here three days ago, in the very same room in which he was born, died suddenly Ambrose K. Striker, the son of a gallant soldier of the war of 1812, and a descendant of two of the oldest and most honorable families of the city. The Striker line goes back to Jacobus Van Strýcker, who came to New Amsterdam from Holland in 1640 (?) and was one of the Schepens or Aldermen of the colony before he found repose in its burying ground. Two of his brothers (one brother and his son it should have said) also sought fortune in the new world, and their descendants are numerous in New Jersey and on Long Island. In the New York branch the name has undergone many variations. Jan Strÿcker is found as a delegate to the Convention of 1653, and about 1780 James Striker married a granddaughter of old John Hopper and thus brought into the family the land on which the present homestead stands. The tract which formed the lady’s marriage portion originally extended from Forty-ninth to Fifty-fifth street, and from the river nearly to Fifth avenue. It is said to have been just one third of the old Hopper farm. But on the death of herself and her husband it was divided between their children, Garrit H. and Winifred, the former of whom built the oldest portion of the Striker homestead, while the latter married Jordan Mott and became the mother of a line whose scions to-day occupy an old house not a hundred yards distant from the Strikers’, like it emowered in trees and approached by a little rustic lane. The domains of the two families have been cut up and reduced in area as the city pushed its way to their confines, and square feet grew to be worth as much as whole acres had been valued at. But both branches have held on to those portions on which their forefathers had built themselves homes. That of the Strikers was begun in 1751, and although it has been altered and added to over and over again, the original walls yet stand. Three feet thick, of rough hewn stone and good time mortar, they hold their own against time and weather, and they have now seen almost the entire fourth generation from their founder pass away from within their precincts. The house originally fronted on the river. It was built on a little bluff and from the stoop the old masters of the place could look across their fish pond to the river, with its deep-laden, lazy sloops, and across the river to the Jersey shore still clad in its primeval wood. Now the fish pond is filled up and a young grove of trees occupies its place, but the foliage is so thick in summer that the changes on the stream and on the opposite bank cannot be noticed, and on that side of the house memory may wander back undisturbed for a hundred and fifty years or more.

When General Garrit H. Striker, then only Captain, came home from the war of 1812 through which he had served with the Fifth New York Regiment, he brought his young bride to this house. She had been Miss Eliza Bella Oceanica McDougall, daughter of a Captain in the British Navy, and her name betokened that she had been born at sea. Five sons and two daughters were born to them; Mr. Ambrose Kingsland Striker was their youngest son. He was born in 1832 and never married. Though a lawyer by profession he never practiced and his life was spent in retirement, tempered with genial hospitality. He lived all his life in the old house, studiously avoiding all change in it or its surroundings and treasuring up all the mementos of its early history. An old oaken chair in the hall, a picture of Captain McDougall in light blue coat and ruffles, another of General Striker in his Major General's epaulets, and still another of Jacobus Van Strÿcker in a deep collar and velvet pour-point, suggest the most salient features in the family story."

New Jersey, is her son.

+ 305. James, born January 2, 1792, on Staten Island, New York; married (first) Cornelia, daughter of Colonel Phineas Manning, a partisan cavalry officer of the Revolutionary War, April 20, 1815. She died April 28, 1825. He married (second) Hannah Maria, daughter of Captain Luther Halsey, June 22, 1826, and a sister of Dr. Luther Halsey, Professor both at Princeton and Auburn. She died March 21, 1865. He died June 3, 1864. He entered Columbia College at fourteen years of age and graduated in 1810 with the first honors of his class. He immediately entered the law office of De Witt Clinton and was admitted to practice at the age of twenty-one. He then became the partner of John Ferguson, who succeeded Mr. Clinton as Mayor of New York. In the meantime war had broken out with Great Britain and he offered his services to the Government. He was commissioned a Captain and became a popular officer. At the close of the war he returned to his profession and soon after married the daughter of a Revolutionary soldier. She lived just ten years. After his second marriage he removed to Buffalo, New York, having been appointed Judge of the Court of the county of Erie, and was until 1840 a “jurist of superior reputation.” At the same time he held the office of Indian Agent to the Six Nations, and was also a prominent Democratic politician and journalist.

When the Government resolved to move the New York Indians further west, Judge Stryker was commissioned to make a treaty with them for that purpose, in which he was eminently successful. His tremendous nerve, fearlessness, great presence of mind, knowledge of human nature, personal influence and presence carried him through this trying period. About this time the Canada Rebellion broke out, the British meddled with the Buffalo Indians, the Quakers and the white squatters on the reservations did the same, and a large and powerful opposition arose against the Government. But through it all Judge Stryker never carried a weapon, although pressed to do so by friendly Indians, who alone knew his danger, but his eagle eye and his eloquence subdued a rising of the Indians and a sympathizing mob in Buffalo. The treaty was consummated without a drop of blood being shed, and it is only in these days of Indian horrors that we can fully appreciate such a result. Judge Stryker resigned his Judgeship in 1840, and returned to New York City to commence law practice with his old friend, Governor Mason. In 1849 his sight became impaired by a severe attack of ophthalmia. He was the publisher of the “American Register,” which he continued for six years. He died at Sharon, Connecticut, at the residence of his son, very suddenly, of heart disease. A sketch of his life may be found in Drake’s American Biography and in Allibone’s Directory of Authors.

Just before the civil war he removed to New York and when the Fire Zouaves were organized he accepted a commission therein, and at the time of Ellsworth’s death was acting as Adjutant. He commanded the Guard of Honor which came on with the remains of his deceased commander to New York. The organization of the Ellsworth “Avengers” or People’s Ellsworth Regiment, the Forty-fourth New York Volunteers, was a signal for him to resign his commission in the regiment of Fire Zouaves and to join the men who were pledged to avenge the death of his former friend. He enlisted as a private soldier August 4, 1861, and the second day thereafter was made a Lieutenant; the fourth day, a Captain; in less than four weeks Major, and September 21, 1861, was appointed Colonel of the Regiment, one of the youngest officers of his rank in the army. Colonel Stryker was in all the battles and skirmishes of the Army of the Potomac, under General McClellan, and commanded a part of the advance guard before Yorktown. At the capture of that place the following dispatch was sent:

“General Fitz John Porter, Comf’d’g Fifth Corps.
Put your most reliable regiment into Yorktown with the Colonel commanding the post.
Geo. B. McClellan, Com’d’g, &c.”

Order was endorsed:
“Colonel Stryker, Com’d’g Forty-fourth New York Volunteers, obey this order immediately.
F. J. Porter, Major General Com’d’g Fifth Corps.

From the seven days battle before Richmond he came out sick and disgusted and resigned his command in the autumn of 1862. But recovering his health and spirits and his old love for fight and his patriotic devotion to the cause of his country, in January, 1863, he raised the Eighteenth New York Cavalry, and took the field as Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding. In October, 1863, he was commanding brigade of cavalry in Camp Instruction, near Washington, and in February, 1864, was ordered to embark with his regiment for Texas, but was detained at New Orleans. He was on the Red River expedition and gained for his command the title of the “Fighting Eighteenth.” In this expedition he and forty of his men were cut off by the Texas Cavalry under General Dick Taylor. After a hard fight of eight miles within the enemy’s lines they were captured. General Taylor treated Colonel Stryker with the greatest respect and consideration and allowed him to visit General Banks to make arrangements for his exchange, which he effected. Colonel Stryker was in all the battles and skirmishes under General Banks. After the war he returned to Chicago, where he now resides.
